Course Description

This graduate seminar has two main objectives: (1) To explore the main theoretical, empirical, and methodological approaches to the study of Chinese politics, and (2) To relate these approaches to the broader fields of comparative politics and political economy.

What phenomena are the focus of rigorous research in Chinese politics, and how are they studied? How could they be better studied? What has Chinese politics contributed to the fields of comparative politics and political economy, and vice versa? What are the most effective ways to integrate area studies, broader comparative approaches, and theory? This course prepares graduate students for dissertation proposals and subsequent research on China

Course Requirements

Short responses (40%)

You will write six short responses to the readings, not to exceed one page in length. Each response should critically and constructively explore a theme, debate, method, etc. in the readings for that class session. Short responses are to be posted to Canvas by 5:00pm on the afternoon before class. No late responses will be accepted, since the idea is to quickly get your thoughts down, to share them with the class, and to use them as a starting point for class discussion.

Participation (30%)

First, you are expected to read the assigned material before class and to contribute to discussion regularly and thoughtfully. Second, you will co-facilitate several class discussions. Be prepared to critique the readings, raise questions, and draw connections to other readings and themes of the course but not to summarize. Your role is to launch discussion, and you will help direct the conversation that follows, by preparing several questions for your fellow students. Third, you will be asked to present on relevant debates in the field one or more times throughout the quarter.

Final paper (30%)

You will write a longer, analytical paper of approximately 10-15 pages in length. The longer paper may take the form of a theoretically informed research paper, an extensive critical review of the literature, or a research design that treats the literature as a springboard. The final paper is due on Wednesday, June 8th via Canvas. Unexcused late papers will be marked down 0.1 point per day.

Office Hours

Office hours are Tuesdays, 1:30-2:30pm in 147 Gowen Hall and by appointment via Zoom or in 147 Gowen Hall.

Additional Course Information

Diversity Statement

The Department of Political Science recognizes and affirms the University of Washington's mission to "value and honor diverse experiences and perspectives, strive to create welcoming and respectful learning environments, and promote access, opportunity and justice for all." We expect every member of this community to contribute toward cultivating an inclusive and respectful culture throughout our classrooms, work environments, and campus events.

Disability Resources

If you would like to request academic accommodations due to a disability, please contact Disability Resources for Students, 011 Mary Gates Hall (<http://depts.washington.edu/uwdrs>). If you have a letter from DRS indicating you have a disability that requires academic accommodations, please present the letter to me so that we can discuss the accommodations you may need for class.

Religious Accommodation

Washington state law requires that UW develop a policy for accommodation of student absences or significant hardship due to reasons of faith or conscience, or for organized religious activities. The UW's policy, including more information about how to request an accommodation, is available at Religious Accommodations Policy. Accommodations must be requested within the first two weeks of this course using the Religious Accommodations Request Form.

Academic Integrity

Students at the University of Washington (UW) are expected to maintain the highest standards of academic conduct, professional honesty, and personal integrity. Plagiarism, cheating, and other misconduct are violations of the University of Washington Student Conduct Code (WAC 478-120).

Covid Information

We will follow UW guidance for classes. FAQs about COVID-19 and UW Policy can be found here.

Course Materials

Course materials are available full-text online through the UW Library E-Journals and E-books collection. Print editions of books are available through online booksellers, on order at the UW Bookstore, and on reserve (in process) at the East Asia Library.
